These are the things I will miss from Thailand - it is an interesting list

The Weather - its always perfect. Maybe a little hot sometimes but all in all its great. The 3 seasons are fairly predictable and you know what to expect.

Beautiful Girls - there are gorgeous girls everywhere in Thailand - including my girlfriend Nang.

Living like a King - the standard and quality of living that I enjoy here is unrivalled - for the cost!

Things are cheap - most things are much cheaper here unless it is a foreign product

Maid - not having to clean up, wash clothes or do the ironing is worth a lot

No ironing - just to emphasise how much I hate ironing!

Food - the food in restaurants, stalls, on the street, at home is just great. The variety of food available is fantastic and the range of international food available is also astounding.

Live Premiership football - I get to see almost all the games live!

Easy parking - in parking lots they let you double up and leave the handbrake on! Cool idea!

Public transport - taxis are everywhere and cheap, the Skytrain and Subway are efficient, clean and cheap and motorcycle taxis are a great way to beat the traffic

Speaking Thai - i invested a lot of time into learning Thai and have become quite proficient in conversation

Massage - almost every week I went for a massage and practically had my own personal masseuse. I am sure my joints will start to ache and I am not sure if I will motivate myself to pay 100 euros for 1 hour!

Markets - I loved going to the markets. They have everything and its great for people spotting.

Pantip Plaza - an amazing place for all computer geeks. It is a massive building that is packed with everything relating to IT. You can get some really great bargains here but you have to watch out for the sharks. All the counterfeit goods on sale here is mind boggling.

Cheap DVD's - For 100 baht I can get the latest DVD. Thats about 2 euros! And that is to BUY it and not just rent it.

Post Database - Every wednesday in the Bangkok Post there is a great insert for IT geeks. It really is very well written and is bang up to date.

Coffee World - the coffee here is fantastic - I love the Latte. It just hits the spot. Have even thought about taking the franchise to IReland.

Paying the bar bill at the end - no need for the stupid rounds system. You order your own drink and when you want to go home you pay the entire bill

Pool - I played a lot of pool during my stay in Thailand and was beginning to become a fairly decent player! I was even voted the Best New Cummer in the Hua Hin League!
